the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Act 1983, 1990).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the care of people with mental health problems. The Department of Health (1994) has set out a vision of a new mental health service, which will be based on the following principles:

- People with mental health problems should be treated as individuals, with their own needs and wishes.
- People with mental health problems should be treated with respect and dignity.
- People with mental health problems should be treated as equal citizens.

[The following text is a dense, handwritten manuscript, likely a letter or a page from a book. It is written in a cursive script and is mostly illegible due to the quality of the scan. The text appears to be a continuous paragraph or a series of connected thoughts. The handwriting is fluid and somewhat slanted. There are some words that are more legible than others, but the overall content cannot be accurately transcribed. The text is written in dark ink on a light-colored paper. The page number '100' is visible in the top left corner. The text is centered on the page. The handwriting is consistent throughout the page, suggesting it was written by a single person. The overall appearance is that of a historical document or a personal letter.]

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million (1990–2000) and is projected to increase by a further 1.5 million by 2020 (Office for National Statistics 2001).
